If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html

If Jesus had changed the Sabbath day, it would be so extremely significant that Jesus or the apostle Paul would have plainly declared it. But neither did. Hebrews 4:9 in the original Greek confirms, "the observance of the Sabbath Day remains for the people of God." www.isawthelightministries.com/sabbath.html